After watching the short Learning styles video, I know that I am a mix of all three but mostly visual and tactile. If I am only given a brief talk about something then I have no sense of direction to go to. Having an example of someone walking me through it helps my brain process the objective a lot more clearer. I believe that learning styles do matter because depending on the person, everyone learns a little bit differently. Being able to have various and different ways to learn helps all people succeed in what they are pursuing. Whatever learning style works for an individual reflects what their most honest, productive, and accurate work is made. Learning styles are very needed especially in today's day and age because of how education systems are evolving.
